

Rachael Goodhue
Career/Profession

Rachael is being honored for her recognition as an expert in the theory of industrial organization, her prolific research in agricultural economics, and her success as a public policy economist.

TIP Courses
'84 Writing

Education
Swarthmore College '93
University of California, Berkeley Masters '94 and Ph.D. in Agricultural Economics '97

Profession
Associate Professor in the Department of Agricultural and Resource Economics at the University of California, Davis

"TIP was an extraordinary educational experience. In three short weeks, I learned more about writing than I did for the following several years in school. Interacting with a class of talented students and instructors was very rewarding. It was my introduction to the academic life I've chosen to pursue."

TIP Courses
'83 Algebra
'84 Geometry and Algebra II
'85 Thinking, Knowing, and Problem Solving
'86 Logic

TIP Summer Employment
'89, '90, '91, '93
Contributor to TIP Algebra I and Algebra II Learn on Your Own Courses

Education
Duke University '91
Drexel University, Masters of Science in Biomedical Engineering '93
Vanderbilt University, Ph.D. in Biomedical Engineering '96

Profession
Research Assistant Professor of Education, Biomedical Engineering, and Radiological Sciences, Vanderbilt University
AP Physics and Biomedical Physics Teacher, The University School of Nashville

Stacy Stansell Klein
Career/Profession

Stacy is being honored for her outstanding accomplishments in teaching, in developing biomedical engineering curricula, in conducting teacher workshops, and in presenting at conferences while maintaining a significant role in numerous professional service organizations.

"Duke TIP has shaped my life. It formed my best educational experiences as a teenager and guided me towards my career path when I worked on staff. My best friends continue to be those I met at TIP."

Marc Starnes
Community Service

Marc is being honored for mentoring an underprivileged youth from a single parent home. Through Marc's intervention, the young man is currently enrolled in college.

TIP Courses
'84 Pre-calculus
'85 Computer Science
'86 Chemistry
'87 Writing

TIP Summer Employment
'89, '90, '91, '92, '93

Education
Duke University '93
Johns Hopkins School of Public Health, Masters of Health Science in Injury Control '00
Johns Hopkins, Masters of Health Science in Biostatistics '01

Profession
Biostatistician with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration

"Duke TIP provided me with a valuable self-confidence that I did not have. Those four summers helped me overcome many of the pressures of youth that almost all children face."

TIP Courses
'84 Writing
'85 Humanities
'86 International Relations
'87 Psychology

Education
Harvard University '92
Brown University, Masters of Fine Arts '96

Profession
Professor and Ruth Lilly Professor of Poetry at Indiana University

Kevin Young
The Arts

Kevin is being honored for his contributions to the arts as an outstanding poet and editor. He is the winner of numerous national awards and is recognized for his extraordinary gift of storytelling and his generous support of other young writers.

"My time at TIP was magical and made me who I am—a writer, a thinker, someone who appreciates both the power of words and the power of a community that values talent, brains, and just a little bit of weirdness. That's what I found in my summers at TIP and what I look for every day."